Meet the expert behind the stories.

From a young age, Gina L. Osborn dreamed of chasing spies—a dream that led her to the U.S. Army Counterintelligence Program and on to investigating espionage cases in Europe at the close of the Cold War.

In 1996, Gina graduated from the FBI Academy, becoming the only FBI agent in Little Saigon, where she built alliances to combat organized crime. Following the events of 9/11, she led counterterrorism efforts in Los Angeles and later took the helm of the FBI's largest Cyber and Computer Forensics Program, overseeing the global investigation into the Sony Pictures hack.

Through these remarkable experiences, Gina has developed a transformative philosophy she calls Making Maverick Moves—bold, rule-bending actions driven by 'absurd' ingenuity. This powerful mindset isn't just about thinking outside the box; it's about demolishing the box entirely to achieve the extraordinary. Gina has been featured national security and counterintelligence contributor for ABC7 News, KTLA, NBC, LA Times, Orange County Register, and more media outlets and publications.
